The Journey of a Lifetime | Nurse Advisor Magazine

I was hopeful as I started in a new role in a Women's Care Unit in a new hospital. Everything was different for me and I looked forward to a change in the type of clinical practice I would learn. The Human Resources person clearly informed me of the average ages of the women I would care for and the list of the most common diagnoses being treated on this unit.

Downtown to Beach Town: Forty Years in Nursing ...

Now looking back on a forty-three year nursing career, the truth is that time really does fly when one is having fun. Even with hindsight, I would not have changed a day, (well, maybe 1 or 2), because each adventure brought me to the present with the memories of a lifetime to cherish.

Lifetime Use of Nursing Home Care | NEJM

Discussion. The highly skewed distribution of lifetime nursing home use has implications for the financing of nursing home care. If past patterns continue, a majority of those who reached 65 years of age in 1990 will not use any nursing home care. Yet, 1 in 11 can expect to spend at least five years in a nursing home,...
